President praises peace policy

Promises ‘continuity with a purpose’

By Anna Nakambale and Esau Muzeu

President Hifikepunye Pohamba took oath for his second and last term as President, heaping praises on the country’s policy of national reconciliation which had kept Namibia in harmony and at peace with itself for the past 20 years, saying that Namibians must embrace their diverse cultures and continue on the path of peace, security and stability.

“We must rally together as one people with a common destiny,” he said to a cheering crowd. “We must consolidate the foundation for peace for our children and their children’s children. Now, more than ever, we must stand united.

“Just as unity was vital during the liberation struggle, it is still a very important element for the implementation of our common objectives. A divided community wastes valuable time in internal wrangles that can only sap its strength and cause its failure. This must be avoided at all costs.”

Independence Stadium in Windhoek was full to capacity, graced by the presence of sitting and former Heads of State and Government, such as Zimbabwean President Robert Mugabe, who received a long standing ovation, South African President Jacob Zuma, Tanzanian President Jakaya Kikwete, Zambian President Rupia
