WINHOEK - It is do or die in the race to find the real champions in a quadrennial, world and national title encounter.

The most avoided man in boxing is probably a title that should be attached to Paulus Ali Nuembembe at the moment in Africa. With that in mind we cannot deny what he has achieved through boxing, take it or leave it, he has been successful.

The main event of the evening tomorrow, will feature Namibia's Ali "Silent Assassin" Nuembembe who will scuffle out against Sarand Malonga of South Africa for the vacant WBO Africa Welterweight title over 12 rounds.

The Silent Assassin is the army Captain with few words. He knows his fists to make the talking in the ring rather than being too talkative. He has vowed not to disappoint the nation and would win the fight against Malonga, willy-nilly.

"I have been training hard for this fight and am well prepared", says the Silent Assassin tena-

"My promise to the nation is to win this fight. I will make sure that I win the fight to be listed in the WBO top 10."

In the meantime, Nestor Tobias, Nuembembe's trainer and promoter, revealed that Nuempower has come to the rescue in sponsor-
