Ya Nangoloh sues SWAPO

Cites Namibia Today as first defendant

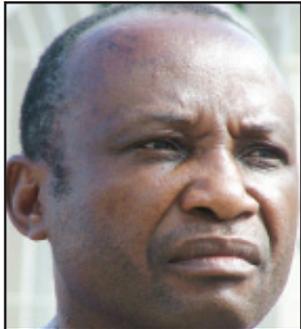

By Asser Ntinda

National Society for Human Rights' Executive Director, Phil Ya Nangoloh, is suing SWAPO Party and Namibia Today for calling him a "pathological liar" over unfounded and baseless claims he had made in newspapers.

SWAPO Party Secretary General, Cde Pendukeni Iivula-Ithana

The case will be defended. Ya Nangoloh is demanding N$250

000 from SWAPO Party and Namibia Today. Ya Nangoloh is particularly irked by the following paragraphs which appeared in Namibia Today's Zoom In last year.

"You (Ya nangoloh) started this fight. Have the courage to see it through. We at Namibia Today have vowed to quash your anti-Nujoma antics. You, (Ya Nangoloh) by design, have thrust that responsibility on our shoulders. We will fight you. If you want this fight to the end, we will give it to you.

"For the sake of democracy, peace and stability in Namibia, we will expose and shred your lies. And name and shame those who are urging you on. Ya Nangoloh is a pathological liar and has come out as such so brilliantly during his Tuesday's (last year) press conference."

Ya Nangoloh said in his summons that he had been "humiliated and degraded" by such publication and had "suffered damages in the amount of N$250 000."

Namibia Today called Ya Nangoloh a pathological liar last year, following his claims that Founding President Sam Nujoma and National Assembly Speaker, Dr Theo-Ben Gurirab, were "agents" of the Central Intelligence Agency, CIA.

CIA is a spying arm of the United States which had overthrown several governments and killed prominent politicians and nationalists in Africa whom the US government did not like during the cold war. Ya Nangoloh's claims have on several occasions been shot down by SWAPO Party as unfounded and baseless.

The allegations were published in the Windhoek Observer in a se-
