Chinese bahaba fish sold at $216,700

BEIJING — With a swim bladder said to be more than worth its weight in gold, this extremely rare 34-kilogram Chinese bahaba was sold for 1.48 million yuan ($216,700) to a merchant in Cangnan, Zhejiang Province on June 7. The fortunate fishermen who fished out the huge monster from the West China Sea made a windfall.

BEIJING, June 7 (Xinhua) — A 34-kilogram Chinese bahaba was sold for 1.48 million yuan ($216,700) to a merchant in Cangnan, Zhejiang Province on June 7. The fortunate fishermen who fished out the huge monster from the West China Sea made a windfall.

"It is not often that one comes across a fish weighing more than 100 pounds," said the owner of the fish, who was selling it for $216,700.

The Chinese bahaba, also known as the "Chinese treasure," is a large freshwater fish that is highly valued for its meat and is considered a delicacy in China. It is known for its delicious taste, high nutritional content, and unique swimming ability, which allows it to move through water with ease.

The sale of the Chinese bahaba highlighted the increasing demand for rare and exotic fish in China, where the appetite for luxury seafood is on the rise. The high price fetched by the fish is a testament to the growing demand for such delicacies, which are often considered symbols of wealth and status.

The capture of the Chinese bahaba caused consternation among conservationists, who warned that the sale of such rare fish could threaten the species' survival in its natural habitat. The Chinese government has taken steps to protect endangered species, but the high value placed on these fish makes it difficult to prevent illegal hunting and trading.

Despite these challenges, the sale of the Chinese bahaba serves as a reminder of the growing appreciation for rare and exotic seafood in China, and the need for continued efforts to conserve these species and ensure their sustainability for future generations.
