I wonder what makes them want to go to parliament now, i guess their fellows members are starving to death now and noted that without SWAPO Government money they cannot help themselves and want to benefit, although i do not believe they can bring any changes as they use to preach! Hahaaha, when they were campaigning for Omuthiya they promise that whether they lose or win they will build free houses or bring development at Omuthiya but still now i have not seen or heard anything what happen anoo?

LOL.. Tala, that is well said! I think they really had a hidden affair, they are now revealing their long hidden relationship which will however not last longer. HH has been a hibernator and a power hungry politician too. We are ready to defeat them come Nov. Regional and Local Authority elections.

Cde. Tulinalyo, I share the same sentiment with you. SWAPO Party is the only party that can defeat the challenges Namibia is currently facing, I believe the SWAPO Government is on the right track to just achieving the major challenges. Comrade, SWAPO is here too stay, whether they like it or not! ALUTA CONTINUA

The marriage of the two opposition parties marks the beginning of their failure and defeat. The Great SWAPO Party is and have been more than ready to squash and of course embarrass them as usual. I always fail to understand why they should always be reminded that they have reached the juncture of political cul-de-sac. The Great SWAPO Party is here to stay and this should be understood by all. I see no need for them to celebrate because there is nothing worth celebrating. Disappointments still awaits them, they should not forget. Comrades lets not even dwell on this much, we have greater challenges that needs immediate attention and debate, like how to ensure that we improve the living standard of all fellow Namibians, by alleviating poverty etc.

Cuba says U.S. policy unchanged, embargo tougher under Obama administration

HAVANA, — U.S. President Barack Obama has not changed its policy toward Cuba as promised while enforcement of its 48-year trade embargo has got even stricter, Cuban Foreign Minister Bruno Rodriguez said Wednesday.

“The embargo policy in the past two years under the government of President Obama has not changed at all...It has been hardened. It has been strengthened,” Rodriguez said in a report to be presented on Oct. 26 at the United Nations General Assembly.

“The embargo is a piece from the Cold War Museum,” Rodriguez said.

“The U.S. president has remained below the expectations concerning to the change of policy toward Cuba and the embargo, expectations that had been created in the international community and the American public itself,” Rodriguez added.

According to Rodriguez, Obama could have used his executive authority to cease the embargo, but instead, during his two years in office, Obama had punished more companies for trading with Cuba than his Republican predecessor George W. Bush.

“He spoke of a new begining it out, just see RDP and RP, they have something in common bt just for nothing.. Is good enough that when they are going to fall, it will not give SWAPO much work, it will be 1 funeral a day, ning with Cuba, of a change in relations... However there is an abyss, a contradiction between his words and his actions,” Rodriguez said.

“The U.S. blockade against Cuba is a unilateral act and should be lifted unconditionally,” Rodriguez said.

“President Obama has eased travel of scholars, artists and religious people as Democrat president Bill Clinton did, but he did not allow Americans to travel freely to Cuba yet,” Rodriguez said.

Rodriguez said the embargo was the main obstacle to Cuba’s development, adding that it had left about 100 billion U.S. dollars in losses since it was established in 1962.

The Cuban government believes the U.S. economic blockade is aimed at causing “hunger, desperation and suffering” to the Cuban people so as to provoke an internal instability that would result in the overthrow of the socialist system on the island. Havana has repeatedly reiterated that the normalization of relations with Washington must be linked to the end of the embargo and the release of the five Cubans imprisoned in the United States on spying charges.
