I think the opinion leaders especially the ones from RADOPA, by doing so, only believe that they will lose the elections and they are failing to understand that they are failing to understand that they are fighting over donors money. Some say ‘reform per se is too difficult’, and ‘it was losing, election officials were replaced by intelligence officials.’ It was crap.

Hidipo told that Kas. We should not be caught napping on duty. We have several local and international non-governmental organizations, NGOs, in the country, which, to all intents and purposes, have become very subservient. They are undermining govern- ance here, and Prime Minister Nahas Angela was right when cited two NGOs that were work- ing to effect “regime change,” here, saying that their presence was a threat to Namibia’s politi- cal stability.” These are the Deutschen Afrika Stiftung, DAS, and the Konrad Adenauer Stiftung, KAS. We should not be caught napping on duty.

Already, KAS has been in the news for the past few months, sparked by its decision to orga- nize a conference in Brussels, which was attended by the President of the Rally for Democracy and Progress, RDP, Hidipo Hamutenya. The meeting was also attended by former rebel move- ments, UNITA and RENAMO, from Angola and Mozambique respectively. Hidipo told that conference that elections in Namibia were “rigged” because when SWAPO Party found out that “it was losing, election officials were replaced by intelligence officials.” It was crap.

The government is also a victim of the same. When they make these noises it is because they have lost that which they occupied illegally, which is now in our possession.”

I have dwelled at length on the Zimbabwe case to draw your attention to what will most likely happen here sooner rather than later, unless our government takes stern corrective measures before it is too late. We see signs today here which show that Zimbabweans saw ten years in their own nation. We have several local and international non-governmental organizations, NGOs, in the country, which, to all intents and purposes, have become very subservient. They are undermining govern- ance here, and Prime Minister Nahas Angela was right when cited two NGOs that were work- ing to effect “regime change,” here, saying that their presence was a threat to Namibia’s politi- cal stability.” These are the Deutschen Afrika Stiftung, DAS, and the Konrad Adenauer Stiftung, KAS. We should not be caught napping on duty.

Already, KAS has been in the news for the past few months, sparked by its decision to orga- nize a conference in Brussels, which was attended by the President of the Rally for Democracy and Progress, RDP, Hidipo Hamutenya. The meeting was also attended by former rebel move- ments, UNITA and RENAMO, from Angola and Mozambique respectively. Hidipo told that conference that elections in Namibia were “rigged” because when SWAPO Party found out that “it was losing, election officials were replaced by intelligence officials.” It was crap.

The government is also a victim of the same. When they make these noises it is because they have lost that which they occupied illegally, which is now in our possession.”

I have dwelled at length on the Zimbabwe case to draw your attention to what will most likely happen here sooner rather than later, unless our government takes stern corrective measures before it is too late. We see signs today here which show that Zimbabweans saw ten years in their own nation. We have several local and international non-governmental organizations, NGOs, in the country, which, to all intents and purposes, have become very subservient. They are undermining govern- ance here, and Prime Minister Nahas Angela was right when cited two NGOs that were work- ing to effect “regime change,” here, saying that their presence was a threat to Namibia’s politi- cal stability.” These are the Deutschen Afrika Stiftung, DAS, and the Konrad Adenauer Stiftung, KAS. We should not be caught napping on duty.