FORWARD EVER and BACKWARDS NEVER!!!
Kindly join the www.swapoparty.org page on Facebook. Thank you.

Posted by Abdul Malik

Really impressed by the activities on this website! SWAPO has always led by the best and rest cannot even follow! This is the SWAPO support. Keep up the good work.

L.H. Hekandjo-Ondara

The majority of the students at Namibia Polytechnic were not happy with the University’s decision to engage in political activities on campus. Polytech Namibia students were also not happy with the University’s decision to engage in political activities on campus.

From SWAPO website: www.swapoparty.org

POSTED BY DUDU

What if we do the same thing for the next election? If we can all vote together and show our strength...The only way SWAPO can win is if we vote together. We need to show the government that we are a force to be reckoned with.

From SWAPO website: www.swapoparty.org

POSTED BY JAFFA

It will be soon, sooner the Regional and Local Authorities elections 2010, do we to do what we use to do, RDP-RP WITH COD, DTA, NUDO, APP and others? If we do this, I am sure you better start plan on the next court case again before famine.

L.H. Hekandjo-Ondara

Comrade MK, the death of Drug was serious. We should apply the principles of God, to recover the soul of God.

From SWAPO website: www.swapoparty.org

POSTED BY Cde Kanapela

I want to take example from the Mudges who are in the NFA that they are doing nothing. Just if they are doing well ask them do they know omusati, oshana, ohangwena, kapandu, kapoeta?...I heard they were in 1977. How could the NP in South Africa fund his break-away party if he really left the NP in the mid-1970s, a time when the NP had withdrawal from all South African elections.

From SWAPO website: www.swapoparty.org

POSTED BY Cde Katusha kaNamibia

My heartfelt condolences to the family, friends & the entire Mighty SWAPO Party for the untimely death of Comrade Peter Tshipunum Tshiunema. May his soul rest in eternal peace.

From SWAPO website: www.swapoparty.org

POSTED BY Cde Kanapela

It will be soon, sooner the Regional and Local Authorities elections 2010, do we to do what we use to do, RDP-RP WITH COD, DTA, NUDO, APP and others? If we do this, I am sure you better start plan on the next court case again before famine.

L.H. Hekandjo-Ondara

Comrade MK, the death of Drug was serious. We should apply the principles of God, to recover the soul of God.

From SWAPO website: www.swapoparty.org

POSTED BY Cde Kanapela

I want to take example from the Mudges who are in the NFA that they are doing nothing. Just if they are doing well ask them do they know omusati, oshana, ohangwena, kapandu, kapoeta?...I heard they were in 1977. How could the NP in South Africa fund his break-away party if he really left the NP in the mid-1970s, a time when the NP had withdrawal from all South African elections.

From SWAPO website: www.swapoparty.org

POSTED BY Cde Katusha kaNamibia

My heartfelt condolences to the family, friends & the entire Mighty SWAPO Party for the untimely death of Comrade Peter Tshipunum Tshiunema. May his soul rest in eternal peace.

From SWAPO website: www.swapoparty.org

POSTED BY Cde Gerhard "Kamve Kanapela OSwapo"

Kantenge

Come the Regional and Local Authorities elections 2010 SWAPO will last year, last month, yesterday, tomorrow, next week, next month, next year forever and ever and ever scoop votes and victory that will make SWAPO critics and power hungry people a history that can not be remembered. GO conducting a proper needs analysis to determine whether the fees and services the students received were tallying.

Students were not only happy with the management’s decision to increase tuition fees and students’ service fees without of the students, and wanted clarity on this issue as well. To Registrars daughter, Comrade Jaffa, who had met the requirements for the Bachelor of Biomedical Sciences but was preferred over those who had met the requirements, has also come under scrutiny. The students wanted to know why Jaffa, the Registrar, was not taken in for disciplinary hearing.

Students were also not happy with the management’s decision to increase tuition fees and students’ service fees without conducting a proper needs analysis to determine whether the fees and services the students received were tallying.

The students gave Polytech Namibia a flop right from the word go. There are just too many competing, if not contrasting, interests at stake to see it through. The two were just poles apart, and would never have worked together to achieve a common goal. “Together We Can Do Better” will soon become “Together We Cannot Do Better.”

Two weeks ago, the Rally for Democracy and Progress, RDP, and the Republican Party, RP, agreed to form a merger, hung anticipated but slow in coming. On Tuesday last week, RDP President Hilipo Hidipo and Republican Party leader Mudge reported to Parliament an agreement for the two parties to work together under the banner “Together We Can Do Better.” The memorandum was read out, Hidipo was quick to announce that RDP wanted to unify all sectors and create a “bright future” and a “just Namibia” for all. “We are making a first step today to open a new chapter for progress and true reconciliation. Our intentions will be put into practice over the next few months.”

Hidipo, it appears, does not understand the Murers. The merger will, sooner or later, be a fatal blow to his political ambitions, which will cost him dearly in the upcoming regional and local authority elections next month. He should have asked Katutura Kaurua and company how Dirk Mudge managed to get them dry and dumped them at the end of the road. And he branched off, taking another road not so familiar to the Kauras.

Dirk Mudge cut his political teeth in the National Party, NP, of South Africa when he joined it in 1958, by then aged 27. By then, the NP was under J G Strijdom. Mudge was a devout Afrikaner, and soon rose to become one of the youngest members of the “all-white Legislative Assembly” in 1961. The NP’s root pillars were, amongst others, the obnoxious system of apartheid anchored on the ideals of white supremacy and white nationalism. Mudge excelled well in the ideology of the NP. Those years in the NP shaped the Mudge that Hilipo is courting today.

As it increasingly became clear in the 1970s for Pretoria that apartheid days were numbered, a new strategy was devised for “South West Africa.” Mudge was picked as the point man to implement that plan. He should resign from the National Party, form a new party and pretend as if he was anti-apartheid. That strategy came to fruition in October 1977 when he mid-sided the Republican Party, RP, claiming he was not happy with the local Nats.

The Mudge strategy was hatched up at the time when the 1975-1977 Turnhalle Constitutional talks were taking place. Small wonder then, that when such talks finally ended in mid 1977, Mudge formed RP, which joined ten ethnic groups under the Democratic Turnhalle Alliance, DTA. And he started running the show, as chairman of the DTA from its inception until 1995. There might have been black leaders as presidents and vice-presidents at the top, but the real power was in Mudge’s hands. His reporting point was Pretoria.

Mudge’s claims that he broke away from the NP because he was not happy with the way “local NP leaders were handling things in South West Africa” are unrealistic with the truth, just as they were in 1977. How could the NP in South Africa fund his break-away party if he really left the NP in protest? Mudge continued to run the show here and reported back to the same people in Pretoria – the very people he had run away from in “disqual.”

Mudge was a key planner of the Multi-Party Conference, MPC, in 1983 – another botched attempt to reach an internal settlement without SWAPO. He masterminded and sold the Transitional Government of National Unity, TGNU, which emerged from the MPC talks, holding the key portfolio of Finance Minister from 1985 to 1989 when the implementation of Resolution 435 started.

He solicited funds from the NP government in Pretoria, which none of the puppets in the DTA and Republican Party could have even considered. All the money from the NP government had gone to various internal parties to fight SWAPO. Mudge combined his skills as a politician with the skills he had acquired in the military. He rose to become one of the youngest members of the “all-white Legislative Assembly” in 1961. The NP’s root pillars were, amongst others, the obnoxious system of apartheid anchored on the ideals of white supremacy and white nationalism. Mudge excelled well in the ideology of the NP.