

What people say

From SWAPO website: www.swapoparty.org

Posted by MAC-T VanTsandi

Those appointed as Governors and are refusing should just completely be stripped off all national responsibilities, as they are undermining the president and the power vested in the mighty SWAPO party by the people to serve the nation. They cannot just want to be eating out @nice, ... go to the regions and go work, go down to the level of the masses, eat mutete nomboga with the people that vote. IN FACT TAKE your NON-VOTING and EXTREMELY SPOILED CHILDREN with, they must go experience life outside the city and maybe they will get to appreciate the masses are doing to keep them where they are today...

Posted by Mathews Nehemiah-ongweidiva

Fellow comrade omaludi osho aningwa omambwana omoluvanda lyo musane ECN nde taa Uunona na Kuuluntu yo SWAPO eta dhenge nee RADOPA noma puppet makwawo .Ondevalombwela nale kutya omutse kaguna endunge ohahepe olutu ,Aanamibia oyo akwaSWAPO ,Na SWAPO oyo Oshiwana and The nation is SWAPO.ALUTTA EFINDA OSHILI

Posted by Cde kapiye Timotheus

SWAPO party is here to stay,they have to know this poem.we told them already that SWAPO is only a party we trust in Namibia.now they don,t have any words to say.CDES i thank you very very much to what you done on 26 and 27 November 2010.let,s proceed doing our meetings and wearing our SWAPO party colours.cdes meetings and rallies not only for campaign purposes but we can do it even we are not facing elections,please Cde don,t be quiet.cogratulations all SWAPO party regional and local authority councillors.keep it up cdes.viva SWAPO Party!i am Cde Kapiye at Okahandja.let,s communicate Cdes 0816104895 but only SWAPO CDES.I thank you.

Posted by I.H.Hekandjo-Okalongo Mr Nyamu words few week ago, iam not say the GRN did NOT do any thing any more, but only saying they needed to do more, finally Nyamu came to have eyes to see something. lol.and once more iam looking forward to hear the men say we/iam the one failed SWAPO PARTY OF NAMIBIA during my term in office alot shuold be done yet, even sunflower oil tap to each household. Cde, so called rdp party is fake,with a fake leadership, poor minded team .Oh my big mouth. Thanks to you all Cde country wide, windhoek west this time also leaned a lesson. LONG LIVE SWAPO PARTY OF NAMIBIA!!!!!! I thank you.

Cuban town planners and engineers who are second to Namibia to work in the Ministry of Regional and Local Government, Housing and Rural Development, pose with President Hifikepunye Pohamba to celebrate SWAPO Party's victory at SWAPO Party Head Office. Photo by Levi Upula.

Two major S Korean parties' members scuffle at parliament

Members of South Korea's ruling Grand National Party scuffle with members of the main opposition Democratic Party at the main conference hall of parliament, in Seoul, capital of South Korea, December 8, 2010.

Zoom In

By Asser Ntinda

Zimbabwean President Robert Mugabe has, once again, been vindicated in his conviction that the leader of the Movement for Democratic Change, MDC, and current Prime Minister, Morgan Tsvangirai, is and has been a stooge and puppet of the Western imperialist countries, who is being used as a pawn in their political chess board to effect their "regime change" doctrine in Zimbabwe.

This time the vindication comes from the horse's mouth – former US Ambassador to Harare, Zimbabwe, Christopher Dell. Dell had worked hard while in Zimbabwe as ambassador to "do in" President Mugabe and replace him with Tsvangirai.

A leaked confidential memo by Ambassador Dell leaves no one in doubt as to where the US and Britain, and other European countries, stand – they want President Mugabe out by all means possible. Ambassador Dell's confidential memo, (published verbatim on pages 8 and 9) is part of the more than 250 000 US confidential diplomatic cables which WikiLeaks is splashing around the world.

The releases have sent shock waves around the world. They show that no world leader has not been spied on by the US, not even its closest allies in Europe and the Middle East. The revelations have sent the US in one of its worst damage control exercises ever mounted by Washington. But it is too little too late.

For President Mugabe, WikiLeaks's decision to release embarrassing secret diplomatic cables has given him potent sharp ammunitions to use against MDC's leaders, who have persistently called on the Western countries not to lift sanctions on Zimbabwe "until Mugabe goes" – a demand that neatly fits in Dell's plan "to do in Mugabe."

ZANU-PF has long been reluctant to do business with Tsvangirai, rightly pointing out that Tsvangirai was not himself but part of a bigger scheme aimed at toppling ZANU-PF from power. While Tsvangirai has denied the connections, he has been embarrassed, more than once, by his handlers. Nearly seven years ago, former British Prime Minister, Tony Blair, embarrassed Tsvangirai when he publicly said that he was "working with Tsvangirai to bring change to Zimbabwe." Just last year, former British Foreign Secretary, David Miliband, told all and sundry that Britain would only lift sanctions on Zimbabwe "on the advice of the MDC."

Now here comes another lethal weapon which Zimbabweans must use to the maximum to name and shame Tsvangirai and his team. WikiLeaks simply confirmed what President Mugabe had been telling the world since 2000, that Tsvangirai was being used by the West and he is the main reason why the West has imposed stiffer sanctions on Zimbabwe.

This is a punishment meted out against Zimbabwe just because it did justice and gave meaning to its liberation struggle by claiming what truly belongs to the people – the land. Zimbabwe's agrarian revolution has not been taken lightly by the Western countries, led by Britain and the US. But Zimbabweans went to war for land.

Their independence would have meant nothing if they did not take it from those who looted it from the indigenous people. The notorious Cecil John Rhodes led that brutal land seizure campaign. When Zimbabwe started taking back its land in 2000, it was people in London and Washington who became very angry, much angrier than Zimbabweans themselves. This, indeed, is globalization at its best.

Dell's secret memo should be seen in that context. The Western countries have been urging Tsvangirai's supporters to confront the Zimbabwean government in the streets, since they have dismally failed to dislodge ZANU-PF from power by legal and constitutional means.

The "We Choose to Defy and Confront: Defiance Campaign" and the "Defiance Campaign Launch" are cases in point. These campaigns were meant to paralyze Zimbabwe politically and economically. The aim was to create an ungovernable situation, thus making it easy for Tsvangirai's external handlers to effect "regime change" Washington's way.

Calling on people to confront a legitimate government in the streets is subversive, but despite inciting insurrection against the government, Tsvangirai and his supporters still walk freely in Zimbabwe – a very rare situation by any standard anywhere in the world.

Maybe this was what frustrated Dell during his tour of duty in Harare. Had Harare arrested those people who were inciting violence, Ambassador Dell could have danced his nose out. But this did not happen, leaving Ambassador Dell with one sharp comment.

Dell wrote in his secret memo: "To give the devil his due, he (President Mugabe) is a brilliant tactician and has long thrived on his ability to abruptly change the rules of the game, radicalize the political dynamic and force everyone else to react to his agenda."

What is clear from Ambassador Dell's secret memo is that the Western countries have been working on plans to remove a legitimate government from power in Zimbabwe, using unconstitutional means. Dell has confirmed that Tsvangirai is a stooge advancing Washington's agenda against the people of Zimbabwe.

Tsvangirai has betrayed the little trust other leaders in the Southern African Development Community, SADC, might have had in him. In short, by agreeing to be used as a stooge in Washington's chessboard, he has severed the trust and thrown away the moral suasion that makes nationalism sacred. Tsvangirai holds his office cheap, and his treacherous acts dear.

Now, the game is clear. Those conducting the orchestras in the background have been unmasked, thanks to WikiLeaks revelations. There is an intensified bid on the part of our erstwhile colonial masters to re-colonize Africa, using stooges they can lay their hands on and easily handle and manipulate.

Faced with such treacherous maneuvers, it is prudent that Africans remain not only united, but also vigilant. Today is President Mugabe. Tomorrow is anybody's guess.